- g. to provide affordable housing for low and moderate income women and their children.

Our Vision

WRSFV Vision – for the next 15-20 years (2006 – 2026)

The Women's Resource Society of the Fraser Valley is a leader in creating a world in which people peacefully resolve conflict in their homes, communities, countries and across the globe. Through innovative programs, diversity practices, social enterprise, and partnerships we build community capacity for spiritual, physical and emotional growth, and social responsibility in harmony with the environment.

Our Values

Feminist: We are a feminist organization working with women for the advancement of women. Our work is a sustained and organized effort to address the historic inequality between women and men. We recognize the systemic nature of oppression and power imbalances in all their forms including class, white-privilege, language, culture, sexual orientation, age, ability, geography, position and others. Our policy-governance structure incorporates opportunities to share power through democratic practices of shared leadership, decision-making, authority and responsibility.

WRSFV Values

The values of the Women's Resource Society of the Fraser Valley reflect our commitment to making the Fraser Valley better for women and their children. Each value applies to our self, each other, and our community.

The Women's Resource Society of the Fraser Valley values:

Trust by having a firm belief and confidence in our self and in others.

1. We trust that people are acting with good will and with good purpose.
2. We behave in a trustworthy manner by acting in a direct and honest way.
3. We trust that others have the skills and abilities to fulfill their roles and responsibilities and can be relied on to assist us when needed.
4. We act with the confidence that we do the very best we can with what we know at the time.

Respect by treating ourselves and others with regard and consideration.

1. We value women's wisdom. We respect our life experience by recognizing that each experience is significant though it may not be conclusive.
2. We hold each other and all people in the highest regard, recognizing each person's humanity.
3. We listen deeply, creating an atmosphere where all are comfortable to speak.
4. We provide opportunities for each person to be accountable for their choices and actions.
5. We value a mentally and emotionally safe work environment. We have zero tolerance for verbal, emotional or physical abuse, including harassment, bullying, racial discrimination or any other discrimination.

Woman Centred Approach
June, 2011 Mandate amended

Integrity by striving for honesty, reliability and moral soundness.

1. We can be counted on to do what we say we are going to do. Whenever possible, we keep our commitments to others. We take responsibility for communicating when we are unable to meet a commitment.
2. We strive for congruency. Our words and actions are in agreement.
3. We own our actions and do our best to learn from them.

Choice by recognizing, respecting and acting on the power and opportunity to choose.

1. We work from a woman-centered or client-centred approach. We trust that a woman can make the best choice for herself with what she knows at the time. We assist others to seek out the best information possible, including any known consequences, so that they are in a position to make an informed choice.
2. We respect our own views and choices while respecting the views and choices of others.

Compassion through kindness, caring and sensitivity.

1. We treat others with empathy, care and respect.
2. We treat each other with the same empathy, care and respect that we offer the women and children we work with.
3. We listen and act with empathy by standing beside each other in our search for solutions.
4. We believe in our ability to succeed through affirmation and practice.

Commitment by being engaged, dedicated and accepting of our obligations.

1. While recognizing and addressing power imbalances, we accept responsibility for our individual roles and responsibilities, and respect the roles and responsibilities of others.
2. We have good work ethics, including giving our best efforts, establishing healthy boundaries, protecting the privacy of others, continuing our professional development, and liaising with community.

Diversity by respecting, accepting and celebrating our individual and collective differences.

1. We are inclusive of age, language, culture, ability, sexuality, geography, religion, politics, class, education and image, among others.
2. We continue to strive for diversity and to address oppression in all areas of our mandate. We ensure that diversity is addressed in our hiring practices, committees, volunteer recruitment and services.
3. We give ourselves permission to learn and continue to learn and practice diverse ways of being. We hold ourselves accountable for our unintended acts of exclusion. We understand and accept that we are part of and are influenced by the social structures we want to change.

Communication that is clear and open.

1. We strive for access to accurate information. We use all available tools and processes to share and access information in a timely manner.
2. We take ownership for our assumptions and check them out by asking questions and initiating direct conversations.
3. We ask for information, clarification and context when we find ourselves disturbed by what we hear or read.

Partnership by working together.

1. We recognize that we are not working alone. We engage each other, other programs and our community in our efforts to fulfill our mandate.

We recognize that our strength comes from engaging others and sharing our knowledge and resources. We are open to and with others.

Philosophy Statements

1. Women have the right to political, economic and social equality.
2. Women who have experienced violence and other forms of abuse are essential allies in the work of program development, public education and social change.
3. Women and children have the right to live free from violence and other forms of abuse.
4. Women have the right to reproductive choice.
5. Women's experience, voice and wisdom are unique and vital resources to society.
6. Women are oppressed because they are women; additionally, they experience racism and other forms of oppression based on ethnicity, class, culture, sexual orientation, spirituality, age, ability and physical and psychological characteristics.
7. Women's liberation is strengthened by solidarity among women.

WOMAN CENTRED APPROACH

The woman-centred approach used by WRSFV staff in all of our programs and services is an elemental part of the feminist philosophy of the society. This approach is rooted in the values of the WRSFV and is most visibly represented in our practice.

1. We believe women.
2. We ask a woman how we can help and her answers direct our actions.
3. We believe that women are their own best authority.
4. We understand that behavior is complicated and influenced by complex variables.
5. We believe that any woman is doing the best she can given the resources and the support she has, combined with the challenges she carries.
6. We pay attention to power differences and seek to reduce such differences.
7. We look for what is right and strong in a woman and we encourage and support this.
8. We encourage others to look at what is right and strong in a woman.
9. We don't give up on a woman.
10. We work together and support and encourage each other.
